What do you get that someone who seems to have everything? High-tech CEOs, surrounded by the latest and greatest in gadgetry, can think of plenty of great digital gifts.

We asked a few of them to pass along their wish lists, and what they're buying others. Like consumers, many of these CEOs fancy digital cameras, Apple products and auto-related doo-dads.

-- eBay CEO John Donahoe: "I want a new laptop for home with an Intel 5 core processor so we can stream whatever is on the laptop onto any of the TVs in our house. I wonder if I could persuade folks to set up an @ebaygroupgifts for it :)"

-- SAP co-CEO Bill McDermott: The head of this business software giant plans to give tablets, tablets, and more tablets to friends and family on his list.

-- Garrett Camp, CEO and co-founder of StumbleUpon, a discovery-based online search engine: The fledgling photographer has his eyes on a Leica M9 camera, which combines classic range-finder design with the latest digital technology. He also wouldn't mind receiving Google TV. "I don't watch a lot of TV but the idea of integrating the web, television and apps into one seamless experience is great," he says. "It would be fun to stumble web content on my living room big screen."

Camp is also a fan of SoundRacer, a transmitter that can be plugged into a car lighter and set to the FM dial. It lets drivers make their vehicles sound like high-performance sports cars. "It turns your Honda into a Ferrari," he says.

-- Amit Kapur, CEO of Gravity, a new personalized search engine: The former Myspace chief operating officer plans to gift the Xbox Kinect video game accessory, the Dyson Air Multiplier, the X-mini Capsule Speaker and Google TV.

-- Walt Doyle, CEO of location-based service Where: "I'm completely loving my iPad," he says. "I've got the 3G version and it's a godsend on the train every morning." He's also "psyched" about Windows Phone 7. Lastly, for those friends who are gamers, Doyle is a big proponent of Xbox Kinect.

-- Danny Shader, CEO of PayNearMe, a new online-payment service: Shader is
